SENATE PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE FOR SENATE BILL 60

49TH LEGISLATURE - STATE OF NEW MEXICO - SECOND SESSION, 2010

AN ACT

RELATING TO PUBLIC EMPLOYEES; ENACTING THE HAZARDOUS DUTY
OFFICERS' EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONS ACT; PROVIDING PROCEDURES FOR EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES TO FOLLOW IN CERTAIN ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIONS; PROVIDING CERTAIN RIGHTS TO HAZARDOUS DUTY OFFICERS IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO:

Section 1. SHORT TITLE.--This act may be cited as the
"Hazardous Duty Officers' Employer-Employee Relations Act".

Section 2. DEFINITIONS.--As used in the Hazardous Duty
Officers' Employer-Employee Relations Act:

A. "emergency medical technician" means an individual who has been licensed by the department of health as an emergency medical technician;

B. "firefighter" means an individual who is

1 employed as a non-volunteer firefighter and who has taken the 2 oath prescribed for firefighters;

3 C. "hazardous duty officer" or "officer" means an 4 individual who is employed full-time by the state or a 5 political subdivision of the state as a firefighter, emergency
6 medical technician or paramedic, provided that "hazardous duty
7 officer" does not include an individual who has not completed
8 the probationary period established by the individual's 9 employer as a condition of employment; and 10 D. "paramedic" means an individual who has been 11 licensed by the department of health as a paramedic.

12 Section 3. INVESTIGATIONS OF HAZARDOUS DUTY OFFICERS--
13 REQUIREMENTS--LIMITATION.--

14 A. When a hazardous duty officer is under 15 investigation by the officer's employer for alleged actions
16 that could result in administrative sanctions being levied 17 against the officer, any interrogation of the officer shall be 18 conducted:

19 (1) when the officer is on duty or during the 20 officer's normal waking hours, unless the urgency of the 21 investigation requires otherwise; and

22 (2) at the employer's facility, unless the
23 urgency of the investigation requires otherwise.

24 B. Prior to commencement of an interrogation
25 session:

.181153.1

1                   (1) the officer shall be informed of the name
2 and rank of the person in charge of the interrogation and all
3 other persons who will be present during the interrogation;

4                   (2) the officer shall be informed of the 5 nature of the investigation, and the names of all known
6 complainants shall be disclosed to the officer unless the chief 7 administrator of the officer's employer determines that the 8 identification of the complainant shall not be disclosed
9 because it is necessary for the protection of an informant or 10 because disclosure would jeopardize or compromise the integrity 11 or security of the investigation; and 12                   (3) a reasonable attempt shall be made to 13 notify the officer's immediate superior of the pending

14 interrogation.

15                   C. During an interrogation session, the following 16 requirements shall be adhered to:

17                   (1) each interrogation session shall not 18 exceed two hours unless the parties mutually consent to 19 continuation of the session;

20                   (2) there shall not be more than two 21 interrogation sessions within a twenty-four-hour period, unless 22 the parties mutually consent to additional sessions, provided 23 that there shall be at least a one-hour rest period between the 24 sessions;

25                   (3) the combined duration of the officer's

.181153.1

[bracketed material] = delete

1 work shift and an interrogation session shall not exceed 2 fourteen hours within a twenty-four-hour period, unless the
3 urgency of the investigation requires otherwise;

4 (4) there shall not be more than two
5 interrogators at any given time;

6 (5) the officer shall be allowed to attend to 7 physical necessities as they occur in the course of an 8 interrogation session; and

9 (6) the officer shall not be subjected to 10 offensive language or illegal coercion by the officer's 11 interrogator in the course of an interrogation session.

12 D. An interrogation of an officer shall be 13 recorded, and the complete interrogation shall be published as 14 a transcript; provided that any recesses called during the 15 interrogation shall be noted in the transcript. An accurate 16 copy of the transcript or tape shall be provided to the 17 officer, upon written request, no later than fifteen working 18 days after the investigation has been completed.

19 Section 4. POLYGRAPH EXAMINATIONS.--After reviewing all 20 the information collected in the course of an investigation of 21 a hazardous duty officer, the chief administrator of the 22 officer's employer may order the officer to submit to a
23 polygraph examination administered by a licensed polygraph 24 examiner, provided that:

25 A. all other reasonable investigative means have

1       been exhausted; and

2               B. the officer has been advised of the 3       administrator's reasons for ordering the polygraph examination.

4               Section 5. RIGHT TO PRODUCE EVIDENCE.--When a hazardous 5       duty officer is under investigation for an administrative 6       matter, the officer shall be permitted to produce any relevant
7       documents, witnesses or other evidence to support the officer's
8       case and the officer may cross-examine any adverse witnesses
9       during any grievance process or appeal involving disciplinary 10      action.

11              Section 6. PERSONNEL FILES.--

12              A. No document containing comments adverse to a 13      hazardous duty officer shall be entered into the officer's 14      personnel file unless the officer has read and signed the 15      document. When an officer refuses to sign a document 16      containing adverse comments, the document may be entered into 17      an officer's personnel file if:

18                      (1) the officer's refusal to sign is noted on 19      the document by the chief administrator of the officer's 20      employer; and

21                      (2) the notation regarding the officer's 22      refusal to sign the document is witnessed by a third party.

23              B. A hazardous duty officer may file a written 24      response to any document containing adverse comments entered 25      into the officer's personnel file, and the response shall be

.181153.1

1 filed with the officer's employer within thirty days after the 2 document was entered into the officer's personnel file. A 3 hazardous duty officer's written response shall be attached to 4 the document.

5 Section 7. CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS--NOTIFICATION.--When a
6 hazardous duty officer is under administrative investigation
7 and a determination is made to commence a criminal 8 investigation, the officer shall be immediately notified of the 9 investigation and shall be afforded all the protections set
10 forth in the bill of rights of the United States constitution
11 and of the constitution of New Mexico.

12 Section 8. FORCED DISCLOSURE OF FINANCIAL INFORMATION.--A 13 hazardous duty officer shall not be required by an employer to 14 disclose information regarding the officer's financial status, 15 unless all other reasonable investigative means have been 16 exhausted or except as otherwise required by law.

17 Section 9. POLITICAL ACTIVITY.--

18 A. A hazardous duty officer shall not be prohibited 19 by an employer from engaging in any political activity when the 20 officer is off duty, except as otherwise provided by law.

21 B. A hazardous duty officer who is an employee of a 22 political subdivision of the state shall not, as a condition of 23 that employment, be prohibited from seeking election to, or 24 serving as a member of, the governing body of any other 25 political subdivision of the state.

1           Section 10. EXERCISE OF RIGHTS.--A hazardous duty officer
2 shall not be subjected to any retaliation by an employer due to 3 the officer's lawful exercise of the officer's rights under the
4 Hazardous Duty Officers' Employer-Employee Relations Act.

5           Section 11. APPLICABILITY.--The provisions of the 6 Hazardous Duty Officers' Employer-Employee Relations Act govern
7 the relationships between hazardous duty officers, as 8 employees, and the state or any of its political subdivisions, 9 including home rule municipalities and class H counties, as 10 employers; provided that nothing in that act shall supersede or 11 otherwise affect the application of any statute or local 12 ordinance relating to criminal investigations or procedure.

13           Section 12. EFFECTIVE DATE.--The effective date of the 14 provisions of this act is July 1, 2010.

Hi Anthony,

Would you please research on the 6th of July to see if we had any telephone calls from Darren White. If we did, provide me with wav files of all calls please. The cell # we have on record is 505-697-1476.

Also would you please send me the radio traffic relating to this incident, from the time of dispatch until 45 minutes into the event.

Thank you,

On 07-06-11, I was dispatched to 11200 Montgomery Blvd NE, to assist Officer A. Walck #1807, in reference to an accident with injuries call. Upon arrival, I observed Officer A. Walck and AFD Rescue on scene, both parked East bound Montgomery. I observed a vehicle in the Westbound to South bound turnbay and I parked behind the vehicle to block traffic. I approached the vehicle to assess the damage, to determine if I could assist Officer A. Walck by completing a tow-in report. I approached the front of the vehicle and observed that the hood was open and observed that the trunk was located on the front of the vehicle. I observed a piece of AFD equipment in the trunk and acknowledged an AFD Firefighter. The Firefighter advised me that he was attempting to locate a spare tire and he was unable to. The Firefighter indicated that the driver was unusual and I asked if he detected any alcohol and he stated no then indicated that the pupils were constricted indicating possible opiates, but that the driver stated that she was on medication. I made contact with Officer A. Walck and advised him that if he determined he needed a JRE, what the process would be and Officer A. Walck inquired about a Supervisor as an option. I then relocated to my vehicle and started to prepare a tow-in report. I asked Officer A. Walck if the vehicle was going to be towed and he stated yes. I relocated to the vehicle and advised the driver of the vehicle from a distance to take anything of value out of the vehicle, then I returned to my vehicle. I had no other contact with the driver, while in my vehicle completing the tow-in report Officer A. Walck and Mr. White were obtaining Case number information so I wrote the information on a piece of paper and provided it to Mr. White. I asked him if he wanted a copy of the uncompleted tow-in and he stated no. I had no other contact with Mr. White. I inventoried the vehicle and provided the tow-in report to the driver and Officer A. Walck. Officer A. Walck told me that the driver had medical issues and was being taken to the hospital by Mr. White.

White Did Nothing Wrong, City Spokesman Says

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. -- City officials told Target 7 that Albuquerque Public Safety Director Darren White didn't violate policy when he rushed to the scene of his wife's accident in his city-issued vehicle.

Last Wednesday, White showed up at Montgomery and Juan Tabo after his wife hit a curb around 8:30 a.m.

A paramedic's report said he was in an undercover car with lights and sirens on. White disputes that claim.

Target 7 asked city spokesman Chris Ramirez if White violated city policy because it was a personal issue. Ramirez said White did nothing wrong.

Ramirez, along with City Attorney Kathy Levy, refused to tell Target 7 what policies, if any, the public safety director must follow. Target 7 even called White, but he would not take the call.

"The truth will show that I behaved as any concerned husband; that I did not act inappropriately in any way," White said at a Monday evening news conference.

See next page

The city's spokesman said White was driving an Albuquerque Police Department vehicle. APD Sgt. Trish Hoffman said White doesn't have to follow APD policy while going to accident scenes because he's not a sworn officer.

According to the New Mexico Department of Public Safety, White can still drive a city police unit and run lights and sirens. He's just not allowed to arrest or ticket anyone.

Right now, an investigation is under way to see how APD and White handled the entire incident. The man conducting the investigation, Bill Deaton, had no comment.

In a statement released Tuesday, Mayor Richard Berry said Darren White "expressed concerns about the conduct of certain city personnel at the scene." Neither Berry nor White provided further details.

The mayor has ordered the city's independent review office to look into how the entire incident was handled.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. -- The Albuquerque police officer who responded to the car crash involving Darren White's wife spoke out for the first time to Target 7.

News Updates: Like 13K

The police chief openly criticized that officer earlier in the week, saying he mishandled the report.

When Kathy White ran her car into a curb at Juan Tabo and Montgomery last Wednesday, her husband, Public Safety Director Darren White, showed up in his city car and took her to the hospital.

Police officer Al Walck was one of at least two officers at the scene. Now, he's under investigation for turning in his accident report late.

"(The report) should have been written and turned in Wednesday. For some reason, the officer did not turn it in," Albuquerque Police Department Chief Ray Schultz said.

Walck told Target 7 that his police report didn't need to be turned in that day. He said Kathy White admitted at the scene to using prescription drugs, as reflected in his report. The 38-year veteran of APD said he didn't want to rush writing the report because he wanted to further investigate.

"When I went to the police academy, they taught us to put in enough information to acquit and convict," Walck said in a phone interview.

Walck said APD administration called him over the weekend and forced him to write the report from home. He turned it in on Monday. Schultz said he rejected the report because of grammatical errors.

Walck disagrees and said he's never had a report rejected in his career for that reason. When Target 7 asked Walck why the chief would have said that he said, "He will have to explain this in a court of law when I sue him."

The officer said he turned the report in again. Despite the time constraints, he said he included everything he had to. Walck also called the investigation into his conduct "maybe a smokescreen."

The mayor has ordered an independent investigation into the case. Judge William Deaton is in charge of that.

Here we go again....more of the same, corrupt APD. I'm sure Officer Walck is correct, it does sound like smokescreen tactics on the part of the Chief of Police. Chief Schultz seems to be pretty good at it, after all he has had lots of practice. Inspite of an independent investigation, I'm sure this will be swept under the APD rug just like everything else.

Some of us actually care about the actions of those we are paying a six figure wage to.

Some of us actually expect these people supposed to be protecting us. To be examples of how our society should work. Not hide behind lies, cover-up, and the "buddy system". So that they can live above the law, all while on our dime.

Mr. White has been a shining example of what we don't need in our community time and again. So many levels of corruption this guy has been involved with in his tenure.

I ran out of characters in my previous post but it goes to the character issue with White. When he ran unsuccessfully for Congress and lost he was involved in an affair with his current wife and immediately upon losing he deserted and divorced his then wife. So here we have a guy, the typical right wing hypocrite who was an adulterer and he has spent his entire life on the public/government payroll. This case and Chief Schultz's actions smell to high heaven.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. -- Mayor Richard Berry said he won't know if the wife of Public Safety Director Darren White got preferential treatment when she wrecked her car last week until an internal investigation is complete.

"I don't know because the internal review isn't done," Berry said.

Berry said he's counting on an independent investigation to shine light on the incident.

"That's what I want as the mayor. That's what the community wants. ...Show me the facts," Berry said.

Kathy White, the wife of the city's public safety director, ran her car into a curb last week at Montgomery and Juan Tabo. The police report shows that she admitted to taking prescription drugs and was driving with blurred vision. Darren White showed up at the scene in his city police SUV and took her to the hospital.

The responding police officer told Target 7 that Kathy White's blood wasn't drawn at the accident site for a possible DUI investigation, even though the police report shows the officer asked about it.

Darren White released his wife's urinalysis results on Monday that show a drug screen came back negative. Documents show the test was roughly five hours after the accident. Police told Target 7 that a blood draw is much more comprehensive than a urine test.

"From my standpoint, there's been no direction to give anybody preferential treatment. I haven't seen anything at this point in time that leads me to believe that," Berry said.

Right now, all city employees involved that day are under investigation, including the paramedics, police and Public Safety Director Darren White. The investigation will take two weeks to complete.

Who Drank the Poisoned Kool-Aid Freely; Who was Forced?

Fresh from the "rumor mill" some interesting questions have developed. Darren White, while trying to cover up his wife's alleged DUI crash, passed poisoned Kool-Aid laced with felonies and other crimes around. While some drank it freely, did he force others to drink it?

If some of you remember the catastrophe in Jamestown, Guyana, another fascist dictator, Jim Jones, offered poisoned Kool-Aid to his followers. Those who refused the poisoned drink were held down and forced to drink. Our "rumor mill" believes that Mayor Richard Berry, CAO Rob Perry, and Chief of Police Raymond Daniel Schultz all chose to drink freely. But did Deputy Chief of Police Elizabeth Paiz, Deputy Chief of Police Allen Banks, and Commander Clifford Saylor drink freely or were they forced?

The rumor mill tell us that White knew he was wrong for running full police code to the scene and interfering with the police investigation. Ultimately, White removed a potential DUI offender from a crash scene. According to the Journal (read it here), "city officials said White is not a certified or sworn law enforcement officer and does not carry a gun during working hours." The journal article also stated, "The brown Chevy Tahoe he drove to the scene of his wife's crash last week is one of two city vehicles equipped with lights and sirens that is driven by a civilian, officials said." The article claims that the other fully equipped vehicle belongs to Mayor Berry and the vehicle is mostly driven by a sworn police officer. If White is not certified why has he been seen wearing a police badge with five stars? Why was he running full police code to the crash scene if he is a civilian? Isn't this impersonating a police officer? Don't you wish you could run around and play cop with lights flashing and sirens blaring? Instead of admitting his wrongs, White allegedly started passing around the poisoned Kool-Aid.

The first to guzzle the juice was Berry, Perry and Schultz. Berry knows White is wrong but is still backing him. Perry at the news conference became angered at the media and literally threw copies of Kathy White's records at the media. Perry blamed the media for White's fiasco. Our Eyes tell us that Perry offered to sue two local television stations on White's behalf. Next up to shoot off his mouth was Chief Schultz. According to Schultz who was once a DUI Sergeant for APD, stated there was not "probable cause" to conduct a DUI investigation. Schultz also blamed the media. Let's see, Kathy White admitted to consuming a mind altering drug, she admitted to driving, she admitted to have impairment (blurred vision) and she admitted to crashing into a fix object (a curb). Yup; this is probable cause. Schultz lied to protect White, his lies and crimes as did Perry and Berry.

Next, the rumor mill tells us that Darren White met with one of the officers and offered a "deal" to make this go away or keep the facts under wraps. This amounts to conspiracy, extortion and black mail. If this is true, it appears someone did not keep their part of the "deal." This would make sense because White put the pressure down on APD's top command staff which lead to the next debacle. Paiz sent orders down the chain of command ordering/instructing Senior Officer Walck to keep the facts out of the report, such as the admittance of the drugs and the box that was checked showing that Kathy White admitted consumption of prescription drugs which was an attributing factor. When Walck refused, Paiz sent down the orders again. The question is, did Paiz do this of her own accord or was she following orders from Schultz and/or White? In this mess, Banks had to know what was going on and did nothing. The APD SOP states, "Any act or omission is the same as lying." Walck's chain of command, including Commander Saylor knew about this and did nothing. Saylor received information about this situation through several different sources. This comes down to conspiracy. Walck was wise not to alter the report which is a public document and knew it is a felony to alter a public document. If Paiz did give these orders that were illegal, they are; to wit; conspiracy, extortion and black mail.

Thus, all who had knowledge of this are all guilty of conspiracy, extortion and black mail. This requires a criminal investigation; not an administrative review. This is the time that Gov. Martinez needs to send her elite Political Corruption Unit down to Albuquerque to handle this. Since the Governor is a Republican and all the Republicans are trying to save this liar, perhaps the State Attorney General, Gary King, needs to step up to the plate and handle this with integrity.

Did Albuquerque's former public safety director commit insurance fraud? Kathy White admitted to taking a drug for seizures/bi-polarism. Darren White stated that she had been taking it for about a year. Was this disclosed to their insurer?

Another one of our Eyes claims that White does not have enough time paid into PERA (Public Employees Retirement Association). This could be a rumor but our Eyes claim that White withdrew all of his invested money when he left former Governor Gary Johnson's administration. This means that White would need to pay back both his part and his employers' portion. Each year that he may have withdrawn could cost up to 50,000.00 per year. It is possible that he withdrew over ten years worth. If this is true who is paying all that money back? Is it the tax payers of Albuquerque? Did White retire with any retirement compensation?

Some of our Eyes in County Government are telling us that Darren White is smack-dab in the middle of the free tickets scandal from the Journal Center. Our Eyes tell us that formal charges are forth coming in this case.

Darren White is a catastrophe looking for a place to happen; as we have seen here in Albuquerque. Thank goodness that the Honorable Martin Heinrich beat White in the congressional race for District One.

These questions warrant a full criminal investigation. Even if you buy into White and company's rubbish, even if these questions are based on the appearance of impropriety, they must be investigated to the fullest extent. All who played part wittingly or un-wittingly must be brought to justice along with White. If the entire top command of APD is dirty; it is time to clean it out. The Mayor will need to re-evaluate his stance on White and on the rest of his top level personnel who participated in this fiasco. White's stains have bled all over the 5th floor of APD. The Eye On Albuquerque has repeatedly warned you about the "Culture of Corruption" in APD, here is your proof. The Albuquerque Police Department needs new leadership. The slate needs to be wiped clean. The Mayor will need to appoint a chief who is known for dignity, honesty and integrity. No more "good ol' boys!" While Berry is at it, he needs to dump the rest of Darren White entourage. Don't you hate it when someone up and leaves; and leaves all their junk behind for someone else to clean it up?

Kudos to the fire guys and gals who called this one! The community knows we have the best paramedics and EMS equipment in the Southwest region; contradictory to what White stated. The local fire union's vote of no confidence was right on the spot. Too bad Perry and Berry were and are too blind to see past their noses.

The APD officer who responded to a single-vehicle crash last week involving the wife of city Public Safety boss Darren White in his report checked a box labeled "under the influence of drugs or medication" in a section titled "apparent contributing factors."

Officer Al Walck was the first of two APD officers to arrive at the 11200 block of Montgomery NE shortly after Albuquerque Fire Department medical rescue personnel responded, and Darren White also arrived. He eventually drove his wife to a hospital after she declined to be taken by ambulance. He said at a Monday evening news conference that his wife had suffered a seizure.

Walck also indicated in his report that Kathleen White had not been drinking alcohol and that she told him she was taking two prescribed medications: Luvora, a birth-control drug, and Lamictal "for anxiety."

When asked for comment on the contents of Walck's report, including the checked box for "under the influence of drugs or medication," city spokesman Chris Ramirez responded: "Can you really be under the influence of birth-control pills?"

According to the Physician's Desk Reference, which city officials had suggested the Journal consult, Lamictal "may cause blurred vision or impair your thinking or reactions. Be careful if you drive or do anything that requires you to be alert and able to see clearly."

It is used to treat epilepsy and seizure disorders.

primary for Bernalillo County sheriff, has retained a lawyer because he says he fears he's being set up for retaliation by the city administration.

Darren White has "expressed concerns about the conduct of certain city personnel at the scene," according to a statement released Monday by the mayor's office.

Walck's attorney, Brian A. Thomas, shot back on Tuesday with concerns of his own.

"With the open investigation that was talked about in the Journal this morning, and given some of the things that are going on that have not been made public yet, we have significant concerns about retaliation against Officer Walck," Thomas said in an interview Tuesday morning. "My personal guess is that this will end up in federal court."

Thomas declined to discuss specifics.

Mayor Richard Berry has ordered an investigation into the incident by the city's independent review office.

According to police officials, Walck did not conduct a DWI investigation, nor did he request a drug recognition expert at the crash scene. Police Chief Ray Schultz said during the news conference that no DWI investigation was conducted because it appears there wouldn't have been probable cause to do.

City officials held the news conference, in part, to address "anonymous" allegations that Kathleen White had been intoxicated and that her husband acted improperly, criticizing the news media for their coverage of the claims. They also announced the investigation into the incident "from A to Z."

The police report was Walck's second attempt at filing one — Schultz said his first report was rejected Monday morning due to some omissions, mistakes and grammatical errors. Both reports were released to the public.

The mayor's office had said Monday that Walck refused his commander's order to file a report last week.

Ramirez did not return a later telephone call seeking comment about Thomas' retaliation claims.

Darren White said in an interview Tuesday that he has some "history" with Walck, but declined to provide specifics. "I will share that information with the IRO," he said.

Walck has a turbulent history with APD.

He is named as a plaintiff in five different lawsuits against the city and another against the Albuquerque Police Officers Association.

On two separate occasions, once in 1984 and again in 1986, Walck was fired from the department. Both times he got his job back after court battles of two and six years, respectively.

On Monday, the Whites released a copy of a toxicology report from Presbyterian Hospital. The report, which was based on blood tests conducted about five hours after the crash, showed that Kathleen White tested negative for several prescription and illegal drugs. It is unclear from the results whether she was tested for the drugs she told Walck and paramedics she was taking.

Deputy District Attorney Mark Drebing, speaking generally and not about Kathleen White's case, said there's a difference between a blood test conducted at a hospital and one conducted by law enforcement officers who are investigating a suspected DWI case.

Police officers are trained to call in a drug recognition expert, who determines through a series of specialized field sobriety tests whether there is probable cause to draw someone's blood, Drebing said.

Once the blood is drawn, he said, it is treated as evidence and sent to the State Laboratory Division of the Department of Public Safety for testing. Those tests are conducted solely to determine the presence of drugs in the blood.

"Hospitals don't go through the same process," Drebing said. "Hospitals are looking more to determine health risks, if a person has overdosed, etc."

Councilors Want Another White Prob

Inspector General Investigation Urged

 Journal Staff Writer

WHITE:
 Removed wife from crash scene

City councilors initially wanted an investigator from out of state to look into the car crash involving the wife of Darren White, but they have now settled on someone much closer to home. Just a few floors away, in fact.

A majority of the council intends to ask City Hall's inspector general next week to investigate handling of the crash. A council committee made that recommendation on Monday.

Councilors cannot force the IG to initiate an investigation, because the Office of Inspector General operates independently.

But city ordinances allow elected officials to request an investigation and call for the IG to at least evaluate whether to follow up.

Mayor Richard Berry has already directed the city's independent review officer to investigate, but councilors on Monday questioned whether that's the proper approach.

City Council President Don Harris said the IRO can recommend discipline for sworn police officers "but couldn't do anything to anyone else." That could be a problem if the investigation finds fault with White or paramedics who responded to the July 6 car crash involving White's wife, Kathleen.

"The IRO is not exactly set up for this," Harris said. Mayoral spokesman Chris Ramirez said the administration would respect the council's opinion.

"The end goal is to get all the facts and to be in a position to make informed in writing administrative that it is proper investigate work will c IRO report is be additional or investigation findings."

Ramirez said reason to pre See COUN

Water Debt?

ICO INTERSTATE STREAM COMMISSION

twice before in recent years), but as this year's accounts dwindled, State Engineer John D'Antonio said "no."

The shortage being suffered by Elephant Butte Irrigation District farmers this year was in significant part a problem of their own making, the result of a 2008 deal with Texas farmers over how to share supplies on the lower Rio Grande, D'Antonio wrote in a May 16 letter. Under the deal, most of what nature provided in this water-short year ended up in Texas, leaving Elephant Butte Irrigation District farmers dry.

Solving that problem by depleting some of our savings bank of Elephant Butte "credit water" to bail out the farmers could have created longer-term problems on the river, D'Antonio wrote in his letter explaining his decision not to relinquish water.

It's clear now that if D'Antonio had granted the irrigation district's request, we could very well have ended our 2011 water year in the red. In the end, the Elephant Butte Irrigation District agreed, acknowledging in a July 8 letter to D'Antonio that giving it the water "would likely" have put New Mexico in a deficit situation on the Rio Grande, its bank account of credit water depleted.

the report."

The council's Internal Operations Committee voted unanimously Monday to recommend the full council make the request when it meets Aug. 1. The committee's five members comprise a majority of the council. But even if their recommendation is rejected next week, any one councilor has authority to ask the IG for an investigation.

The city's inspector general is Neftali Carrasquillo, who previously worked as the Denver-based "assistant inspector in charge" for the U.S. Postal Inspection Service. As part of that job, he oversaw and coordinated criminal and administrative investigations in at least six states, according to his résumé.

Carrasquillo was at Monday's meeting but didn't promise an investigation if one is requested.

"I can assure you that my office will always be independent," Carrasquillo said.

City Council staff members recommended seeking Carrasquillo's help after councilors asked for the names of people who could do an outside investigation of the White incident. Hiring an out-of-state firm could cost $35,000, and its employees wouldn't have subpoena power, as the IG does, council staffers said.

The debate over investigations comes after Kathleen White was involved in a one-car wreck on July 6. There's been debate over whether it was appropriate for White to take his wife from the scene, and one officer alleges he was ordered to change his report on the accident.

Darren White has said doctors told the couple she had suffered from a seizure.

White later stepped down from his job as public-safety director and maintains he did nothing wrong.

Politics Keeping FAA in Limbo

Democrats, GOP Exchange Blame

By JOAN LOWY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House and Senate leaders exchanged blame Monday for the legislative stalemate that precipitated a partial shutdown of the Federal Aviation Administration while making no overture to resolve the dispute.

The FAA's operating authority expired at midnight Friday, forcing a partial shutdown of the agency. Dozens of airport construction projects across the country have been put on hold and thousands of federal employees were out of work.

Air traffic controllers have continued to work, as well as FAA employees who inspect the safety of planes and test pilots. Transportation officials have said safety won't be compromised. But it was unclear the Democratic-led Senate to resolve the dispute.

Republican leaders said they are determined to hold to their position that the Senate must accept a House-passed bill to extend the FAA's operating through mid-September even though it contains a provision eliminating $16.5 million in air service subsidies for 13 rural airports that Democrats say is unacceptable.

The subsidy program was created after airlines were deregulated in 1978 to ensure continued service on less profitable routes to remote communities. Not all those communities are remote anymore. The GOP provision would end subsidies to communities less than 90 miles from a hub airport or where subsidies average greater than $1,000 per passenger.

Democrats said the real issue is that Republicans are insisting Democrats accept a host of contentious provi-ruary without the labor provision, which Democrats insist must be dropped. They also accused Republicans of tying the elimination of rural air subsidies to their extension bill as a means to prod Democrats to make concessions on the labor issue.

"House Republicans are nowhere to be found, refusing to come back to the negotiating table after pulling yet another cheap political stunt at the expense of rural Americans," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said in a statement.

"Their reckless intransigence has not only shut down the FAA, but is threatening Congress' ability to successfully complete work on the long-term FAA reauthorization that our economy and the livelihoods of thousands depend upon," he said.

The shutdown is costing the FAA about $30 million a day in lost revenue because airlines a box labeled "under the influence of drugs or medication" in a section titled "apparent contributing factors."

White arrived at the scene and eventually took his wife for medical treatment, instead of having an ambulance transport her.

Officers did not conduct a DWI investigation. Police Chief Ray Schultz said at a Monday news conference that there was no probable cause to do so.

The police reports point out that Kathleen White told officers and paramedics that she was taking prescription medications for drug recognition experts.

Frank said drug recognition experts, who are police officers, are not called to crash or traffic stop scenes until a driver is under arrest on suspicion of DWI and has taken a breath test, the result of which is typically too low to reconcile signs of impairment observed by an officer.

Signs that someone may be under the influence of drugs, she said, are slow, sluggish behavior, drug paraphernalia in the vehicle and constricted pupils.

"The officer has to notice enough signs of impairment and poor performance on field (sobriety tests) to place someone under arrest to call the DRE," Frank said. "Pre-lutely cause impairment."

She did not speak directly about the White case, because she is not familiar with it.

Kathleen White told paramedics that she was taking Lamera (a birth control drug) and Lamictal "for anxiety," according to Walck's report.

Lamictal is frequently prescribed to treat epilepsy, seizure disorders and bipolar disorder, according to the Physicians Desk Reference.

The Whites' attorney, Paul Kennedy, said Wednesday that Kathleen White was taking the drug for anxiety and did not have a known pre-existing seizure condition.

Hetes' report does not say how her conversation with number information" with Darren White.

Walck finished talking to Darren White and told Hetes, according to her report, that Kathleen White "had medical issues and was being taken to the hospital by Mr. White."

White, who reports directly to Mayor Richard Berry, oversees the city's fire and police departments.

Berry on Monday ordered the city's independent review officer to investigate the incident "from A to Z."

City Council President Ken Sanchez late Wednesday said a completely independent review of the incident is needed. "Possibly by some-

After speaking with paramedics at the scene of a crash involving the wife of city Public Safety boss Darren White, an APD officer raised the possibility of bringing in an expert trained to recognize drug use, according to that officer's report.

Officer Ylaine Hetes, the second officer on the scene, wrote that an Albuquerque Fire Department paramedic had noted that Kathleen White "was unusual" and that her "pupils were constricted indicating possible opiates." White on Tuesday refused to release a copy of the AFD report that paramedics completed after the crash, saying it contained confidential medical information.

On Monday, White released other medical records showing that a doctor diagnosed his wife after the accident with "new onset seizure."

The Whites on Monday also released the results of a written analysis showing that Kathleen White tested "negative" for numerous prescription and illegal drugs. It is unclear whether she was tested for the prescription drugs she told police she was taking.

According to Hetes' report, she advised the first officer on the scene, Al Walck, that "if he determined he needed a DRE (drug recognition expert), what the process would be and officer A. Walck inquired about a supervisor as an option."

Oh, my.

How to begin to review the melodramatic summer stock production put on Monday evening at City Hall?

White, known for his dramatic flair, was joined by Police Chief Ray Schultz and Chief Administrative Officer Rob Perry, public officials who usually keep their cool under fire. But all three were hot under the collar, scolding and indignant under the bright lights of TV.

The news that brought them together was actually pretty unremarkable: White's wife of less than a year was on her way to the gym when she had blurred vision and drove her Porsche Boxster into the left-hand median curb on Montgomery Boulevard, blowing a tire and bending the rim. A passerby called for help, saying the driver was "kind of out of it" and was having trouble standing up, and city EMTs responded to find 36-year-old Kathleen White.

If you were to fast-forward a few hours, you would learn that Kathleen White was eventually diagnosed as having had a seizure and admitted to Presbyterian Hospital for two days of observation.

That's what White was reacting to as he bristled through a written statement, took a few questions and then announced, "I'm going to go home now." His wife had a scary medical episode, he took her for treatment, case closed.

"It was difficult for me," he said, "to have to sit down with my wife this afternoon and say to her that this private person who's never hurt anybody has to have handouts and said White and his wife had been forced to release private medical information to clear her name.

Except the medical record he released didn't really do that. They showed she had given a urine sample at the hospital that was tested for commonly abused drugs — pot, opiates, cocaine etc. But it doesn't appear she was tested for the medication she told responders she was taking or for alcohol.

This all left the horrible news media with some obvious questions:

- If you release some medical records, why not release all of them? White has refused to allow the release of the Albuquerque Fire Department report, which would likely shed even more light on White's wife's behavior and condition when EMTs arrived.

- Why would a police report on a matter involving the public safety director not be filed, then be filed, then be rejected for omissions, mistakes and grammatical errors and then be refiled?

- If you check the box that says "under the influence of drugs or medication" in a motor vehicle accident investigation, why don't you pursue an investigation of whether those drugs or medication impaired the driver and led to the crash?

- If you're frightened that the woman you love might be suffering from some terrible medical condition, why would you not insist on a safe ambulance ride to a hospital and opt to drive her to urgent care in your unmarked police vehicle? Why would you wait 30 minutes to do so?

- And if you're not just "any husband," but the top law enforcement officer for the city of Albuquerque,

Mayor Asked To Halt White Investigation

4 Councilors Say Contract Invalid

By Dan McKay
Journal Staff Writer

The City Council's four Democrats asked Mayor Richard Berry on Monday to order a halt to the independent review officer's investigation into the handling of car accident involving the wife of Darren White.

They questioned the validity of the IRO's contract and his authority to look into the matter.

The concerns are outlined in a letter to Berry, signed by Councilors Ken Sanchez, Debbie O'Malley, Isaac Benton and Rey Garduño. They want an outside investigator to step in.

The councilors said the administration renewed the contract of William Deaton as IRO on Wednesday. That's two days after the administration said it had turned everything over to Deaton and directed him to investigate.

Furthermore, the councilors said, a city ordinance requires council approval for renewing or extending an IRO's contract.

ter said. "Nor, does it appear the 'Duties' detailed in the contract allow for the type of investigation requested by your office."

Rob Perry, Albuquerque's chief administrative officer, said the IRO has worked previously on a month-to-month contract, under the preceding mayoral administration. Approving his contract extension last week ensured that Deaton could handle the investigation without fearing he'd be fired, Perry said.

"The reality is that by signing the contract, we rebutted any claim of influence that could be exerted," he said.

Perry repeated the mayor's assertion that the independent review officer is the right option for an investigation.

"We have an IRO who's capable of conducting a thorough, fair and objective investigation and can do it in a timely manner," he said. "We frankly don't know why four city councilors — who aren't a majority — would want to disrupt that."

White, a prominent Republican, served as the city's director of public safety, overseeing the police and fire departments, until announcing his retirement last week. He was caught up in controversy over a one-car wreck involving his wife, Kathleen White, on July 6. There's been debate over whether it was appropriate for him to take his wife from the

The couple has decided to release Kathleen White's medical records, White said, to curtail any speculation about the accident. The records show that a Presbyterian Hospital doctor diagnosed Kathleen White with "new onset seizures" and that she tested negative for numerous prescription and illegal drugs.

White said he did not interfere with the accident investigation in any way and that he welcomed the forthcoming probe by Independent Review Officer William Deaton, which was announced at the news conference.

During the news conference, White, Police Chief Ray Schultz and city Chief Administrative Officer Rob Perry scolded members of the media for bringing forward "anonymous" allegations that Kathleen White had been intoxicated and her husband had acted inappropriately.

"People are using my wife's medical condition for cheap political attacks," said White, who was visibly upset during the news conference. "I don't know who's making these allegations, but I have done nothing wrong. Unfortunately, because of these attacks, my wife and I have had to make a decision to provide (media) with her personal medical records, which is something we should never have to do."

An Albuquerque Fire medical rescue unit responded to the scene, which was dispatched as a motor vehicle accident with an "unconscious or fainting" driver, AFD Capt. Pete Longdon said in an earlier interview.

Longdon declined to provide a copy of AFD's report, citing federal medical privacy laws.

Kathleen White told APD officers she was on two types of prescription medication for "anxiety," according to the police report.

Schultz said no DWI investigation was conducted because it appears there wouldn't have been probable cause to do so.

The chief also said it is not uncommon for people involved in crashes to have family members come to the scene, or for family members to transport them to seek medical attention.

During the news conference, White declined to comment on why he transported his wife rather than have her transported by ambulance, adding that will be part of the IRO's investigation.

He also said he was on scene for about 30 minutes before taking his wife to the hospital in his city vehicle but declined to discuss why he was there so long.

Also part of the investigation, Schultz said, will be why APD officer Al Walck did not complete his report the day of the incident, contrary to department policy.

Walck submitted his report Monday morning, the chief said, but it was rejected due to mistakes involving whether Kathleen White's car had been towed, a box checked in the original report indicating a second vehicle having been involved in the crash and a few grammatical errors.

Earlier in the day, the mayor's office said Walck also refused his commander's order to complete the report.

City officials said the IRO will look into the incident "from A to Z."

Mayor Berry, who was not at the news conference, said in a written statement issued late Monday:

"It has come to my attention that certain members of the public have expressed concerns that Darren White was at the scene of a single-vehicle accident involving his wife.

"Director White has also expressed concerns about the conduct of certain city personnel at the scene. The best way to answer all of these concerns is to have the Independent Review Office conduct a thorough investigation into the facts pertaining to this incident, and that is what I've requested. I have given instructions to all departments to turn over all information regarding this incident directly to the Independent Review Office and to not process the information through the Mayor's Office. This will be an independent review."

Berry said in the statement that no city employees will be placed on leave during the investigation, which is expected to take several weeks.

Councilors Consider Outside Investigator

Albuquerque city councilors are taking a serious look at hiring an outside investigator to look into the handling of a car crash involving the wife of Public Safety Director Darren White.

That possibility will be discussed this afternoon at a meeting of the council's five-member internal operations committee, though no final decision is expected.

The council's four Democrats in a letter Thursday called on Mayor Richard Berry to hire an independent group to handle the investigation.

And the council's five Republicans aren't ruling that out, either.

Berry has already ordered the city's independent review officer to examine the crash, including the conduct of White, police and fire personnel at the scene. He said Thursday that he is confident IRO William Deaton, a former federal magistrate judge, can conduct an independent investigation.

The independent review officer typically investigates citizen complaints against police officers, not the conduct of top administrators, some councilors said.

"The IRO is currently an employee of the city, on contract," said Debbie O'Malley, a Democrat. "We think that's too close to the situation."

Several Republicans said they're inclined to wait before supporting an outside investigation. The IRO's report should be available at the end of next week, and the City Council meets Aug. 1.

"When the full council comes together, every option will be on the table, and everyone will be held accountable," Councilor Dan Lewis, a Republican, said in an interview.

Also Thursday, the union representing firefighters, which has long been at odds with the administration, voted no confidence in White.

"As public are all held standard and at same level union President said in sonnel arrived at the scene, as did Darren White. He ended up driving his wife from the scene to the hospital after she declined to be taken by ambulance, and later he said that doctors told the couple she had suffered from a seizure.

In his report, the first officer to respond to the crash checked the box "under the influence of drugs or medication" in a section on "apparent contributing factors," and another officer's report said the two officers discussed the possibility of a drug-recognition expert being called to the scene.

Neither officer Al Walck nor APD officer Ylaine Hetes had belt tapes turned on during the crash investigation, according to Deputy City Attorney Kathy Levy. She said APD policy does not require officers to have their belt tapes turned on during incidents such as the one involving Kathleen White's crash.

Mayor's spokesman Chris Ramirez said in an email that no APD Internal Affairs investigations are being conducted into the incident.

Attorney Brian Thomas, who is representing Walck, said his client and Walck's supervisor received IA target letters on Monday but that both were later told that the IA investigations had been called off.

Mayor: IRO can handle this

Berry said the IRO can handle the investigation independently.

"What I'm interested in is a clear-cut review of the facts," Berry told the Journal on Thursday.

Police and paramedics will talk directly to the IRO, he said.

"What I don't want is the mayor's office filtering the info," Berry said. "The IRO doesn't need our permission" to talk to people.

Berry said he hadn't seen the letter from the four council Democrats calling for an outside group to handle the investigation and couldn't immediately comment on it. But he said he understands the scrutiny.

"If people have questions, that's fair," Berry said.

The Councilors Trudy Jones and Brad Winter, both Republicans, praised Deaton's qualifications. Deaton "is above reproach. I think he's very good," Jones said.

Winter said an outside investigation could take months, so it's best to see what Deaton comes up with before deciding whether to hire someone else.

Councilors Michael Cook and Don Harris said they didn't have firm opinions yet on an outside investigator.

A contract for an outside investigator might require full City Council approval. The entire council must consider contracts above $55,000, but the council staff director can approve contracts smaller than that.

Councilors question need for position

Council president Ken Sanchez on Wednesday called on Berry to place White on administrative leave during the investigation.

Some councilors have wanted White's position eliminated entirely for some time, even before the latest controversy.

"I don't understand the position," Councilor Isaac Benton, a Democrat, said Thursday. "It doesn't make any sense to me."

Jones said the mayor should "reassess" whether the job is necessary, but that it's up to the mayor to decide how to organize the executive branch.

White oversees police, fire and the emergency management office. He reports directly to Berry, rather than the chief administrative officer.

That's a slight change from years past. Under former Mayor Martin Chávez, the "chief public safety officer" reported to the chief administrative officer, the top executive under Chávez, according to organizational charts. But the exact lines of authority were murkier in practice because Chávez took such a hands-on approach to public-safety matters.

Berry said he wouldn't have the job if it weren't important. He noted that roughly half the city's spending is dedicated to public-safety programs, making it wise to have someone with a policy role to oversee those functions and their budgets.

Berry said the public safety director is especially important given that he cut other top administrative jobs to help with budget balancing, such as the chief financial officer and chief operations officer.

Meanwhile, city officials said White is not a certified or sworn law enforcement officer and does not carry a gun during working hours.

The brown Chevy Tahoe he drove to the scene of his wife's crash last week is one of two city vehicles equipped with lights and sirens that is driven by a civilian, officials said.

The other is driven by Mayor Richard Berry, Ramirez said in his email.

"However, a sworn APD officer commonly drives this vehicle," Ramirez wrote.

White said at a Monday evening news conference that he had his emergency lights — but not his siren — engaged when he pulled up to the crash because other emergency vehicles were on scene. He said the lights were still on when he and his wife left the scene because he didn't realize they were still engaged.

Darren White's abrupt retirement on Friday afternoon amid a scandal involving his wife's single-car crash last week brings to an end a colorful, sometimes controversial, career in law enforcement that began in the late 1980s.

White started as a patrol officer with the Houston Police Department in 1986, then spent seven years at the Albuquerque Police Department.

During his time at APD, White reached the rank of sergeant. He had also gained some local fame as the lead vocalist for the anti-drug, all-pop rock band "The Force."

A staunch Republican, he entered the realm of politics in 1994 with an unsuccessful run for his party's nomination to the state House seat in District 30.

The following year, he was appointed secretary of the state Department of Public Safety by then-Gov. Gary Johnson.

White left that post in late 1999, saying he couldn't support Johnson's position on legalizing marijuana and other crimes. At the time, White described the governor's stance as "troubling." He said it was damaging police morale statewide.

White was the subject of a no-confidence vote during his tenure as DPS secretary.

After leaving Santa Fe and the Johnson administration, White did a stint as a reporter for KQED-TV in Albuquerque.

After that, he has been back into the political ring, winning the 2002 New Mexico County Sheriff's race in 2002. White won re-election comfortably in 2006.

In 2008, White was trounced by Martin Heinrich in the race for the District 1 seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

He stayed on as sheriff until October 2009, when he left the county to join incoming Mayor Richard Berry as public safety director for the city of Albuquerque.

White scored another political appointment earlier this year when Gov. Susana Martinez named him to the Judicial Standards Commission.

His time with the city has been tumultuous, at least in part because of a spike in officer-involved shootings that have led to millions of dollars in settlements and payouts in settlements and payouts a crackdown on some police officers' controversial postings on social media websites.

The Albuquerque Police Officers Association voted no confidence in White earlier this year. The Albuquerque firefighters' union did the same on Thursday.

focus on the important issues the people of Albuquerque deserve to have addressed."

Berry held an impromptu news conference late Friday to address White's retirement.

"It's difficult to say no question," the mayor said. He said White had informed him that he would retire. Berry didn't say whether he thought White's decision to step down was the right one.

"I think he feels this is best for the city of Albuquerque," Berry said.

In the statement, White maintained he did nothing wrong when he arrived at the crash scene with the emergency lights engaged on his city vehicle, picked up his wife and took her to seek medical attention. He said he did not interfere in the accident investigation.

Berry said that a planned investigation into the incident will continue.

White in his statement applauded the decision to continue the investigation.

"I intend to work hard to clear my name and stand up for my wife, whose medical condition was, improperly made public through the illegal leaking of confidential medical records," White wrote.

He was referring to a fire department medical report which had been leaked to the news accounts that White has not been part of the journal's coverage.

White and his wife voluntarily released medical records from the hospital where she took her.

Berry said he didn't know how much money leave White would be able to cash out upon retirement. The city's Human Resources Department will handle the details of White's retirement, he said.

Berry said White had shown the crash scene, according to City Councilor Ken Sanchez. That's because the ordinance governing Deaton's job makes clear he is only to investigate citizen complaints against sworn police officers and make recommendations to the chief of police.

Prior to stepping down, White was not a sworn law enforcement officer. Neither are the APD paramedics who responded.

About Public Safety Office

Information about the City of Albuquerque's Public Safety Office.

The Director of Public Safety oversees the Albuquerque police and fire departments, the Safe City Strike Force and the Office of Emergency Management. The Public Safety Director also acts as a Deputy Chief Administrative Officer and reports directly to the Mayor.

The public safety department chiefs are responsible for day-to-day operations of their agencies. The public safety director is responsible for setting policy for all of the City's public safety agencies and makes the broader administrative decisions that effect public safety. The Public Safety Office is located on the 11th floor of City Hall inside the Mayor's Suite.

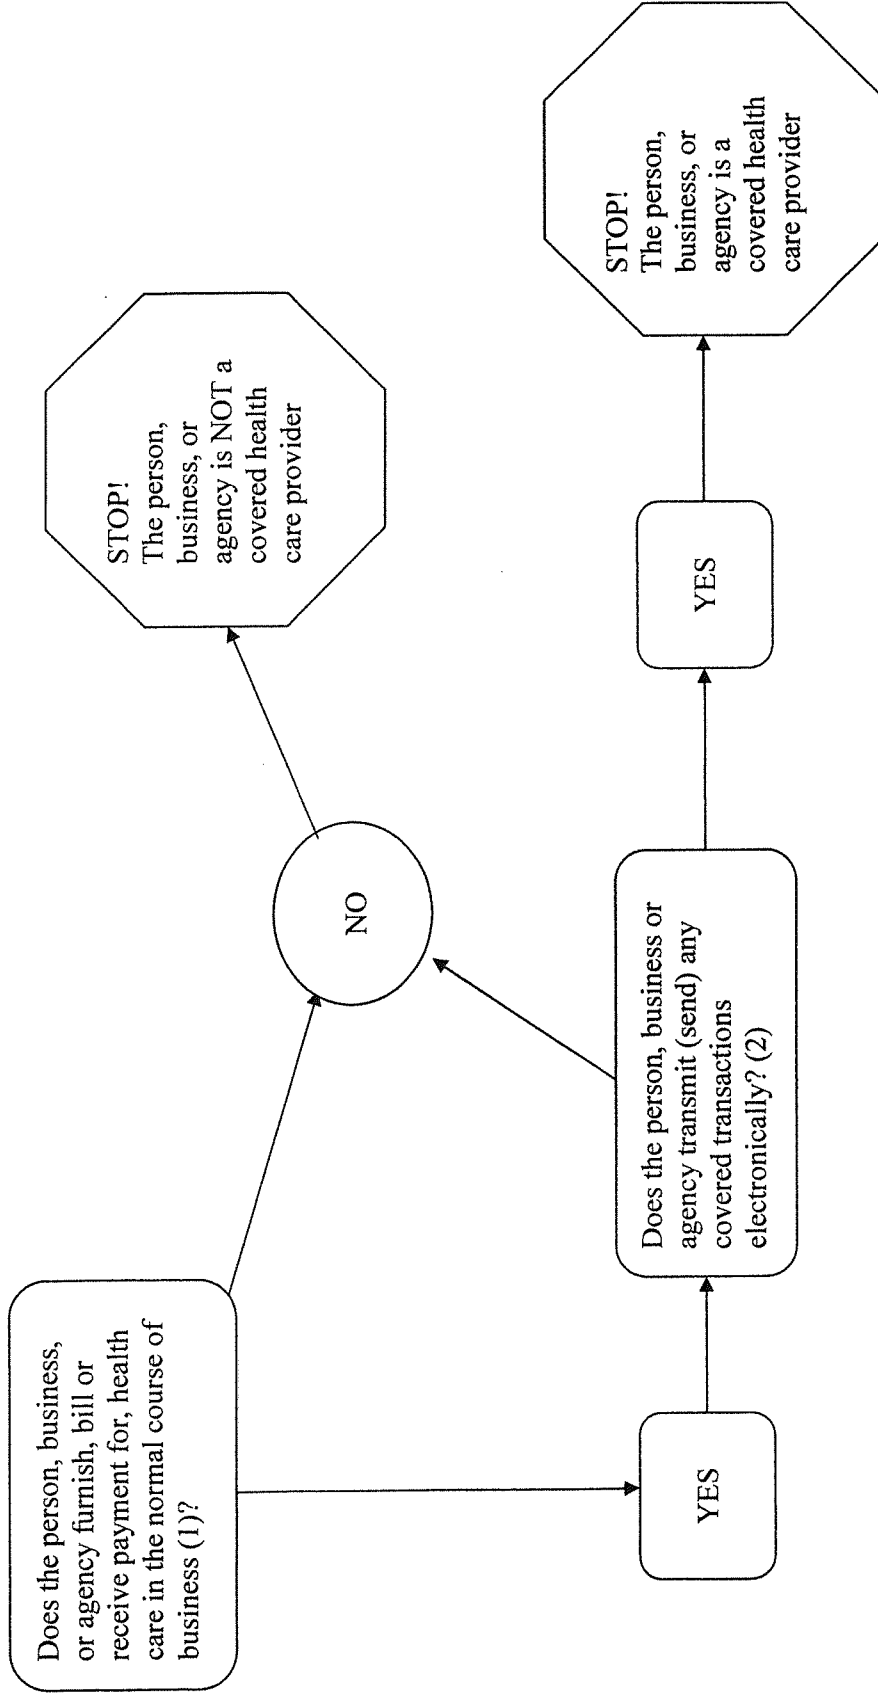

Under city charter, the Public Safety Director is appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council. Since the office was created, there have been three Public Safety Directors.

Hi Paul,

Here is the radio traffic from the time period in question. We did not receive any calls from Darren White on the date in question, nor was there a query over the air from him asking about an accident.

Hi Anthony,

Would you please research on the 6th of July to see if we had any telephone calls from Darren White. If we did, provide me with wav files of all calls please. The cell # we have on record is 505-697-1476.

Also would you please send me the radio traffic relating to this incident, from the time of dispatch until 45 minutes into the event.

Thank you,
Erika

Here are the CAD's for this event, it is both PD and Fire. We also happen to have not only our audio but the AFD audio so I am giving it to you. If Fire gets mad I can't help it. We have it and you are requesting it (I don't think they will).

WaveReader (V4.2.47)
Posted: 7/12/2007

Download Sizes-
WaveReader Software 31MB
WaveReader User Manual 3.9MB

This page contains the latest version of WaveReader software. Downloads are to the right under Related Links.

The WaveReader download is WaveReader only in order to shorten the download time. If you want WaveWatch or SplitWave programs, they can be downloaded separately. Click on the desired link to the right to go to the page needed.

Currently the SplitWave feature that has been integrated in to the WaveReader Program Search Filter does not work properly. To pull individual cameras from the search results you must have the 16 way screen displayed. If you do not then you will only get camera 1.

If you are recording audio it will NOT be in the file you created. If you need audio then you will have to pull the video clip from the Disk Analysis window and use the stand alone version of SplitWave. Use the link to the right to access the download page for SplitWave.
